Viadrinicum 2023 "Learning City. Beyond the Classroom"

Viadrinicum is an annual summer school at the European University Viadrina in Frankfurt (Oder), devoted to the countries of the Eastern Partnership, and the larger context of Central and Eastern Europe. Its 2023 edition will revolve around the multifaceted question, how cities learn, and will look into the entanglements of urban learning and dwelling practices. The summer school will take place between August 19 - September 3, 2023.

Departing from the UNESCO concept of learning cities, which emphasizes educational opportunities primarily from an institutional perspective, the school will invite students, young researchers, civil society activists, artists and cultural workers to equally reflect on the practices and spaces of everyday learning in an urban context. It will provide an opportunity to critically ponder the concept of learning (as well as unlearning) as a relational process, inquiring into its democratic and emancipatory potential. In the light of the massive (internal) displacement caused by Russia's ongoing war against Ukraine, the issue of accessibility of cities' learning infrastructures for the newly arrived will be especially relevant for this year's Viadrinicum.

Negotiation, Peace & Peace-making Spring School (Oxford)

Spring School, 2-4 May 2019, Maison Française, Oxford
Deadline: 11 March

'The most disadvantageous peace is better than the most just war' (Desiderius Erasmus). Half a millennium after Erasmus's famous declaration, 2019 reminds us of the need for effective negotiations. Marking the 100th anniversary of the Treaty of Versailles, one of the most contentious and consequential peace agreements of the modern world, 2019 witnesses the ongoing negotiations surrounding Britain's exit from the European Union. This Spring School will bring together postgraduate researchers in Humanities and Social Sciences subjects to explore themes related to peace, peace-making, and negotiation in diachronic and multidisciplinary perspective. Studies of diplomacy and negotiation are increasingly emphasising the role of non-state actors in international affairs, the importance of soft, as well as hard power in inter-state and intercultural relations, and the need to understand the dynamics of peace, as well as those of war. Meanwhile the role of negotiation and peace within communities remains a vibrant area of scholarship. Confirmed speakers include Dr Maxine David, Prof Adrian Gregory, Prof Adam Roberts, and Dr Tracey Sowerby.

We invite applications from postgraduate scholars at Europaeum member universities to attend, and we also invite applications to give papers addressing the theme of the Spring School and in particular the following topics:

- peace congresses & peace-making
- the role of soft power in negotiations
- the consequences of peace
- international organizations' role in maintaining peace
- representations of peace & negotiation
- theories and/or of peace and/or negotiation
- the ethics of peace & negotiation
- diplomatic actors/negotiators & their agency
- negotiations within communities
- the role of peace within societies

All students at graduate level (master's and PhD) at Europaeum member universities can apply (Charles University is a member): please send an application form (see link below) and a CV of up to 2 pages to euroinfo@europaeum.ox.ac.uk by 11 March 2019. Please also ask your supervisor to email us a reference.

If you want to present a paper, please send an abstract of up to 200 words along with your application.
